Vision for the 'Screaming Bunnies'

I usually don't like to talk about my ideas regarding Precious Miseries and StiTcheS unless 1) I know it will happen and 2) it will happen in a reasonable time frame. However, that is why this newsletter exists, to give a sneak peak at things to (hopefully) come to those who signed up. I hope to go far with the idea of StiTcheS' band, The Screaming Bunnies. I'm in the process of making a new website which will house flash animations of StiTcheS and his band doing what they do best; have fun. At first I may have to have StiTcheS play 'cover' songs until I can free up some time and twist contact's arms to create some new music. Before the animation even happens I have to plan with an animator, do all the art in vector format and pay some money. I do have an idea for StiTcheS' first song though. It's a Korean song, so most of you would not know this song of choice from a band called Novasonic.

Again, this is my vision and I can't promise it will happen this year. I'm still wondering where all of last year went...

StiTcheS' First T.V. Appearance?

StiTcheS (the plush version) will be making a small tv cameo on a live action show called Kamen Rider in 2009. He was used as a prop for a café that needed some merchandise to spice things up. Precious Miseries dolls may also be in the show as well. Kamen Rider Dragon Knight is scheduled to air around April or May of 2009, but things are always subject to change. The series is 40 episodes long and I have no clue which episode(s) he will be in! I suppose we'll have to watch the entire series to find out. And on a side note, StiTcheS is completely letting this get to his head.

Please view the series' trailer at the link below.
